Quantum Computational Machine Vision

A I Lvovsky[1], M Filipovich[1], A Warke[2], L Gong[1,3], K Bearne[1], A Zhang[1], and A Duplinskii[1]

[1]Department of Physics, University of Oxford, Oxford, UK
[2]Department of Physics, Oxford University, Oxford, UK
[3]Agency for Science, Technology and Research (A∗STAR), Singapore, Singapore
Contact Email: alex.lvovsky@physics.ox.ac.uk

By treating machine vision and imaging tasks as quantum sensing, we design and train optical neural networks to implement a measurement that extracts information from the incoming light in the most efficient way permitted by quantum mechanics. Applications include object detection and superresolved microscopy.